Changing the Way Businesses Work

MINNEAPOLIS, MN—May 25, 2007 — This May, Peter Aubart was hired as a senior process consultant for Innovation Process Design, a Minnesota-based firm that specializes in helping businesses manage change and risk.

From his earliest days in business in Minnesota, Aubart has been a problem-solver—from launching new technologies and services to helping companies comply with changing regulations. These successes become even more impressive in light of the fact that he completes projects on schedule—an increasingly uncommon feat in today's complicated business environment.

According to Lee Kuntz, president of Innovation Process Design, Aubart will be an invaluable asset for local businesses. "Peter has years of leadership experience in financial services, operations and risk management. He has an uncanny ability to pinpoint a business's issues and develop solutions that really work. He's created amazing successes in some mission-critical situations and I'm looking forward to our clients seeing the same results."

Aubart says he's always enjoyed tackling complex new projects. "Innovation is putting me into challenging positions that will exercise my skills in helping clients fulfill their objectives."

Innovation Process Design provides expert analytical problem-solving for the most pressing challenges businesses face today. Their Certified Process Consultants™ focus on the areas of process change and improvement, risk management, and new capability development.
